IN designing modern houses, function is the most important thing to be considered. Before you jump right away in creating a great design that will not really work for you, be sure to think of what you really need first. Your house will only be successfully designed if everything can work well according to your lifestyle, profession and taste. Everything should be as functional as possible. This is the best way to make your house, your home.

Modern and mid-century modern styles are currently very popular, so that's what's inspiring many architects and interior designers at the moment here are different window designs which always complement with the exterior design of the house. Most modern houses use window glasses with aluminum framings but some creatively use wood, too. You need to decide if you want more light inside your house or not. This way, the sizes of the window could be determined. But most modern houses use wide windows to allow apt amount of natural light inside the house.

A double-floored building's front elevation is relatively similar to a simple house except for an additional floor. This is another example of a front elevation that displays all the protruding features of this double-floor building uniquely and perfectly. # INTERIOR DESIGN that the décor choices you make will be absolutely vital. A small TV room with a modest television set, maybe a Blu-ray player and additional gadgets requires very little in terms of actual square footage. With contemporary wall-mounted sets and sleek entertainment units, even the tiniest nooks can be turned into a crazy room that serves you well. Add a cool sectional or a plush couch to maximize seating in the room, and you can even throw in a couple of ottomans for kids.

BEDROOM DESIGN

Another challenge in designing a small bedroom is to make it look sophisticated without seeming cramped by too many accessories. In this bedroom, the use of a dark wall panel behind the bed and extending on the ceiling over it creates the illusion of depth, which is enhanced by the floor-to-ceiling mirrored panels on the sides, which reflect the room and add to the sense of space.

MODER SPACIOUS MASTER BEDROOM DESIGN

The chandelier does a good job of illuminating and beautifying the bedroom. Vertical paneling of a metallic finish adorn the wall behind the headboard. Ledges bring about keeping space.

SPECIOUS AND CONTEMPORARY THEME MASTER BEDROOM DESIGN

While some home owners prefer to use dark tones in the bedroom to accentuate the feel of night and contribute to a better environment for sleeping, it can make a room look too dark during the day. The use of subtle lighting accents such as the display spotlights on the shelves, recessed lighting on a ceiling corner as well as spotlighting on the floral wall panel above the bed add lovely touches of brightness.

LUXURY MASTER BEDROOM

The oversized headboard in this earthy bedroom is undoubtedly part of why this set up feels so luxurious. The plush cushioning stretching across the entire back wall makes this room look extra cozy. Of course, the ambiance provided by the sconces and built-in headboard lights don't hurt either.

Study Table Design In Bedrooms

This is one of the most uncomplicated study tables in bedroom design ideas. All you need is to make some arrangements and place your bed on one side of your bedroom, attached to the wall. Then make some room for the study area right next to your bed. For a simple study-cum-bedroom design, you can go for this dark wood finish study table with two handle less drawers. The width and height of this type of table are perfect as study table ideas in a small bedroom. Place the study table on the wall side to keep the place uncluttered and neat. You can couple up this study unit with a simple bucket chair and a floating shelf unit, as shown.

A decorative wall art adorns the wall.
